Segregation of Duties is the concept of having more than one person required to complete a task in order to achieve appropriate levels of internal control. In this instance, appropriate segregation of duties exists when a person cannot create and approve a transaction on a center if he/she also has responsibility for reviewing the monthly accounting reports. In cases where staff size prohibits full segregation of duties, mitigating controls can be put into place to limit the risk. Examples of mitigating controls are having someone with a higher authority level also review the monthly accounting reports, or running a monthly report to view transactions created and approved by the same person. The controls should be documented in the departmental office.

To determine if appropriate segregation of duties exists, the signature authorization form approver should use the Privilege Management application to search for a person's privileges, or contact the requesting department for more information.
